TECHNICAL AUDIT

Category URLs Are Not Descriptive or Consistent

Current observation:

Category URLs include additional identifiers and may not fully reflect the category name.

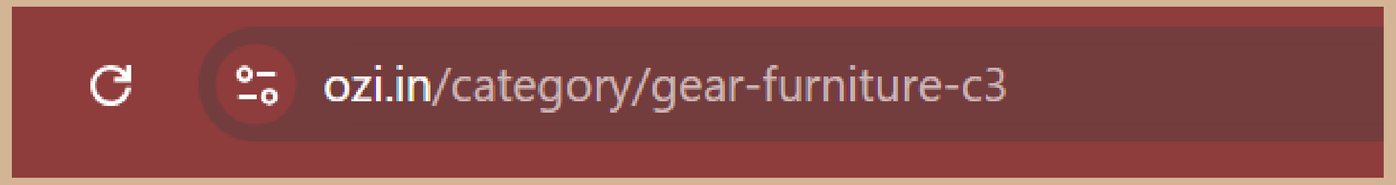

Example:

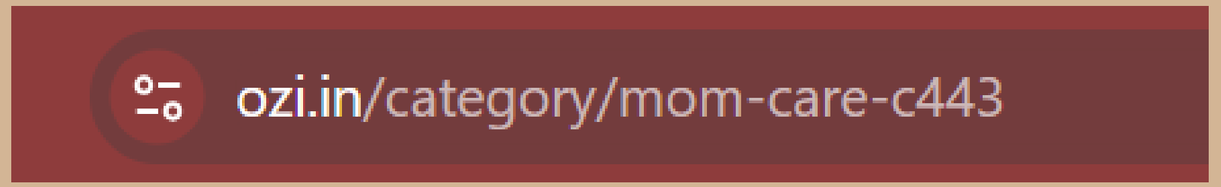

Current: ozi.in/category/gear-furniture-c3

Proposed: ozi.in/category/baby-gear

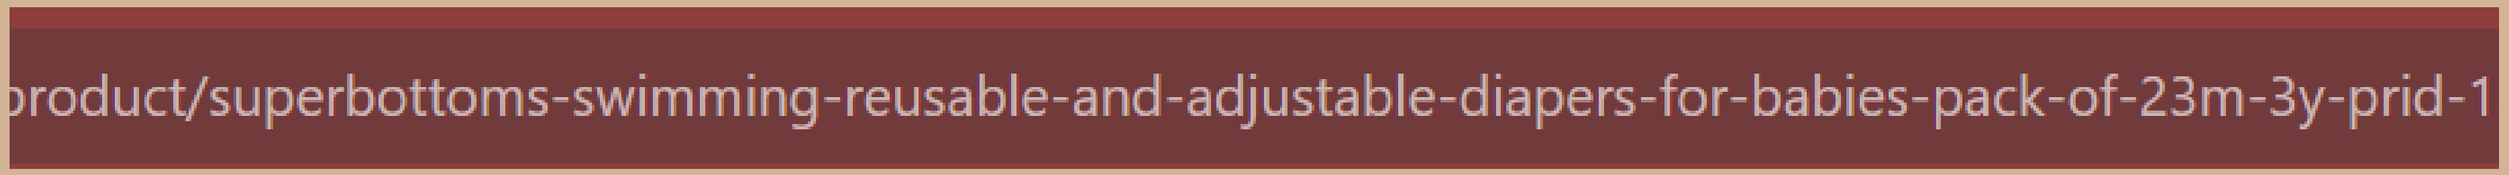

Recommendation

Standardize category URLs using concise, descriptive slugs that align with the actual category name and relevant search terms. Review all category pages and implement 301 redirects wherever URLs are changed.

Lengthy Product URLs With Unnecessary Identifiers

Current observation

The product URL contains a lengthy product name, age/size information, and an additional product ID.

Example:
ozi.in/product/superbottoms-swimming-reusable-and-adjustable-diapers-for-babies-pack-of-23m-3y-prid-13855

Proposed URL

ozi.in/product/superbottoms-swimming-reusable-diapers-babies

Recommendation

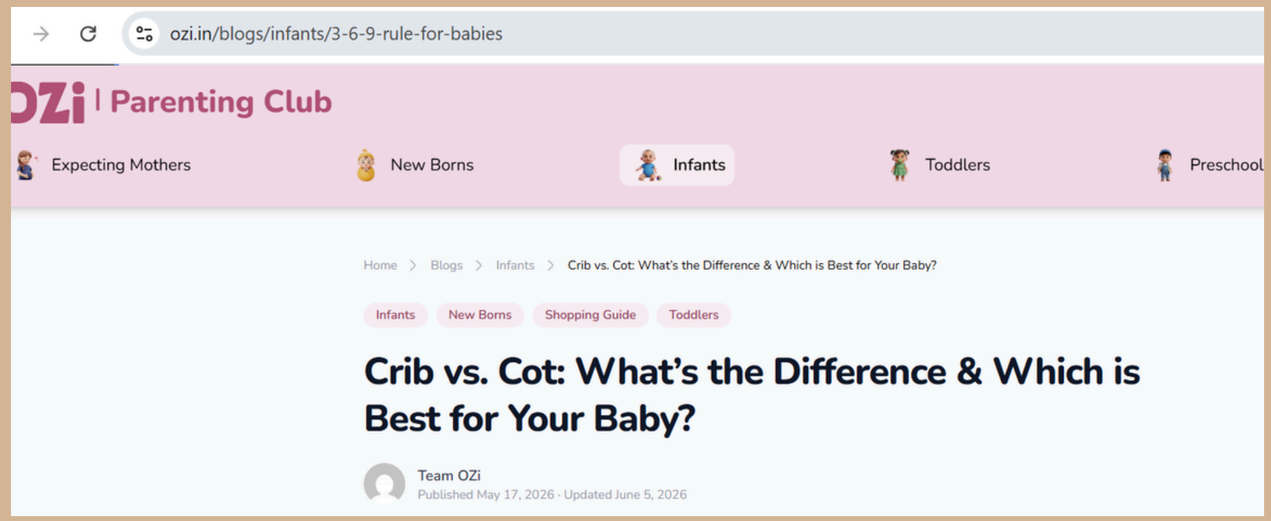

Adopt concise, descriptive product URLs that retain the primary product keywords. Before changing existing URLs, assess organic performance and backlinks, implement 301 redirects, and update internal links and canonical tags.

Blog URL and Displayed Content Mismatch

Current Observation
At the end of every blog, the full text of a related blog is automatically loaded below it. When you scroll down to that second blog, the browser address bar changes to the second blog's URL. But when you scroll back up to the first blog, the address bar does not change back. You are reading Blog A, but the URL shows Blog B.

Example

Open Blog A: ozi.in/blogs/infants/crib-vs-cot-difference
Scroll to the bottom: Blog B (3-6-9 rule) loads, and the URL changes to ozi.in/blogs/infants/3-6-9-rule-for-babies
Scroll back up to Blog A: you are reading Crib vs Cot, but the URL still shows .../3-6-9-rule-for-babies

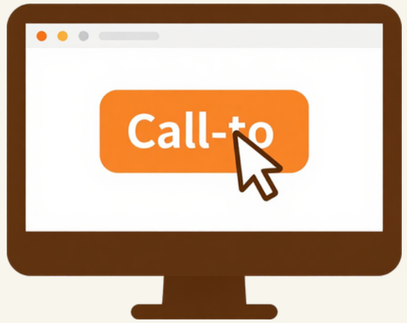

Recommendation

- Remove the auto-loading of the full related blog
- Instead, show a simple "Related Blogs" section with image, title, short description and a link
- The URL should always match the article the user is reading

CRO AUDIT

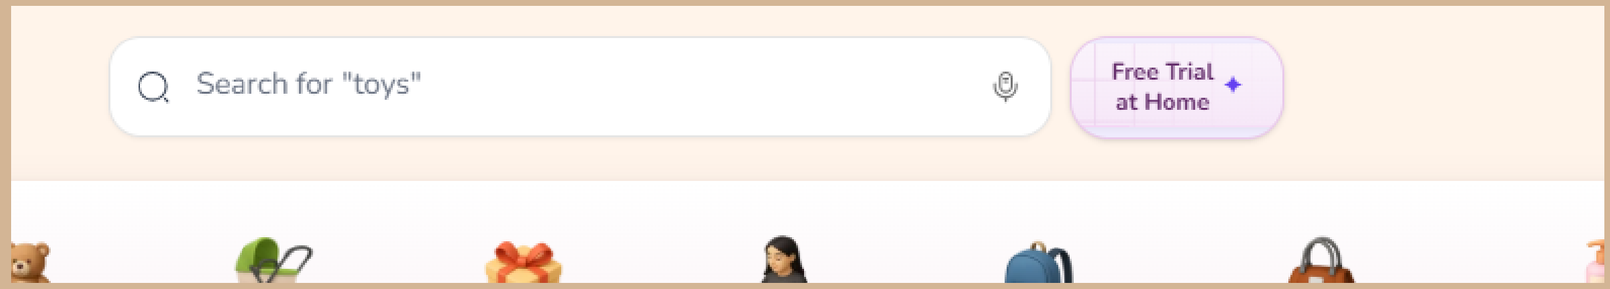

Free Trial at Home CTA Lacks Visibility

Current Issue: The “Free Trial at Home” option appears as a small icon, making it easy for visitors to overlook.

Example: Customers visiting the website may not notice the trial service while browsing products.

Recommendation:
- Make the Free Trial at Home CTA more prominent.
- Clearly communicate the benefits and steps involved.
- Test different CTA placements to identify what drives more engagement.

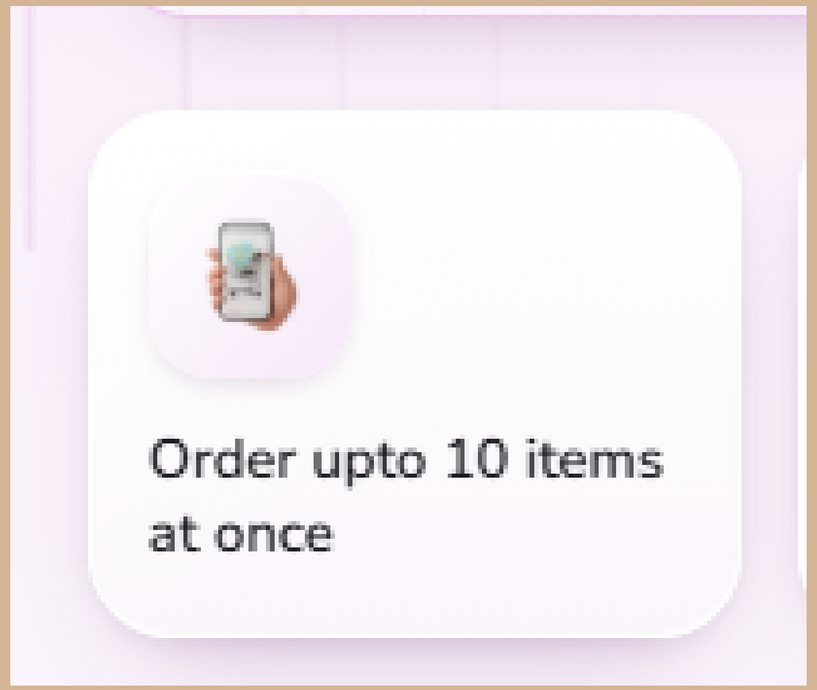

Trial Eligibility May Create Purchase Friction

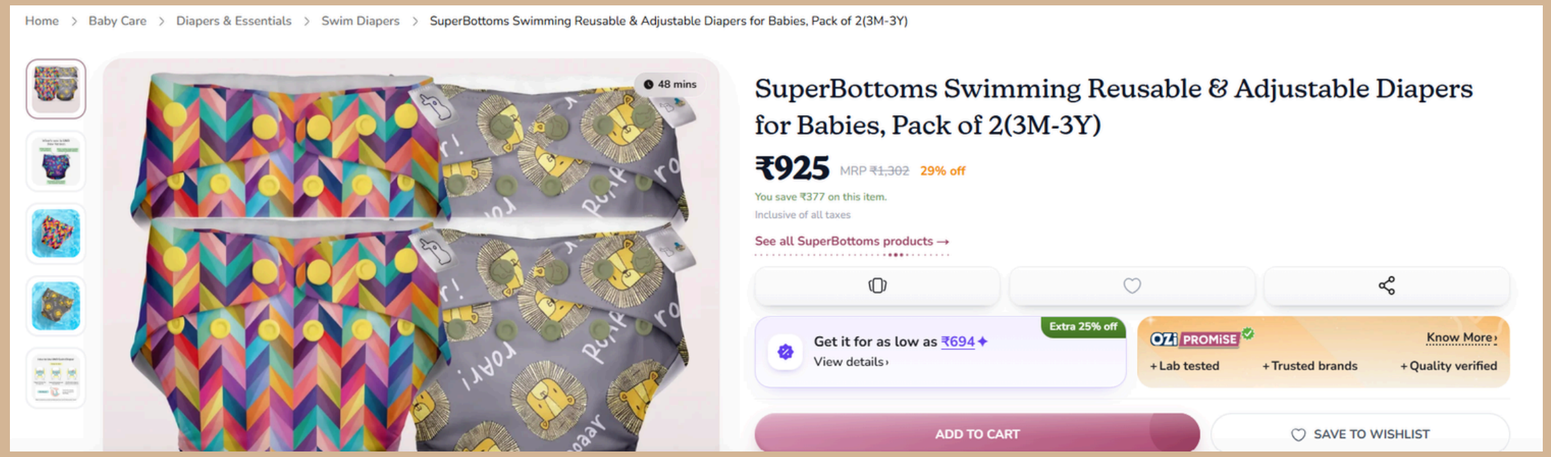

Current Issue: The Free Trial at Home service requires customers to select 10 items, which may create a barrier for users who want to try fewer products.

Example: A customer interested in trying only two or three products may be discouraged by the 10-item requirement.

Recommendation:
- Clearly communicate the eligibility criteria before users enter the trial process.
- Evaluate whether a lower item threshold or minimum order value is feasible.
- Compare trial completion and subsequent purchase rates before changing the requirement.

Product Colour/Design Selection Is Unclear

Current Issue: The product page displays three different colours or designs in its images, but no option is available to select the preferred variant.

Example: https://ozi.in/product/superbottoms-swimming-reusable-and-adjustable-diapers-for-babies-pack-of-23m-3y-prid-13855

Recommendation:

- Add selectable colour/design options if the products are available in separate variants.
- Update product images and availability based on the selected option.
- If the designs are fixed within a pack, clearly explain what the pack includes.

Blog Section Optimization Opportunities

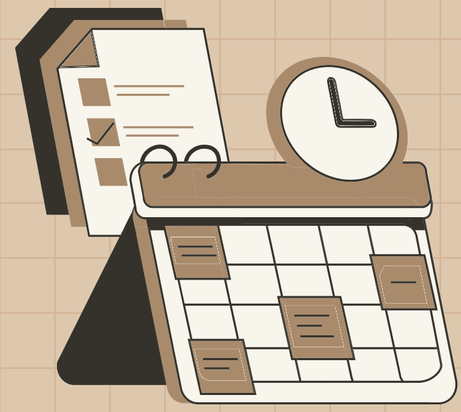

Current Issues

- Content Quality: Some articles contain generic or repetitive information and lack original insights or practical guidance.

- Internal Linking: Related blog articles are not sufficiently connected through contextual links.
- Product Integration: Relevant OZI products are not consistently linked within informational articles.
- Content Organization: The blog section could be better structured around parenting topics, baby age groups, health and safety, buying guides, and videos.

Recommendations

- Improve content with original insights, expert input, practical advice and reliable sources.
- Add author biographies and qualified medical reviews where appropriate.
- Connect related articles and relevant products through contextual links.
- Validate and implement appropriate Article/BlogPosting structured data.
- Organize the blog into clear topic-based sections to improve content discovery.

UI/UX AUDIT

Social Media Links Missing from Website Footer

Current Issue: OZI has Instagram and LinkedIn accounts, but the corresponding links are missing from the website footer.

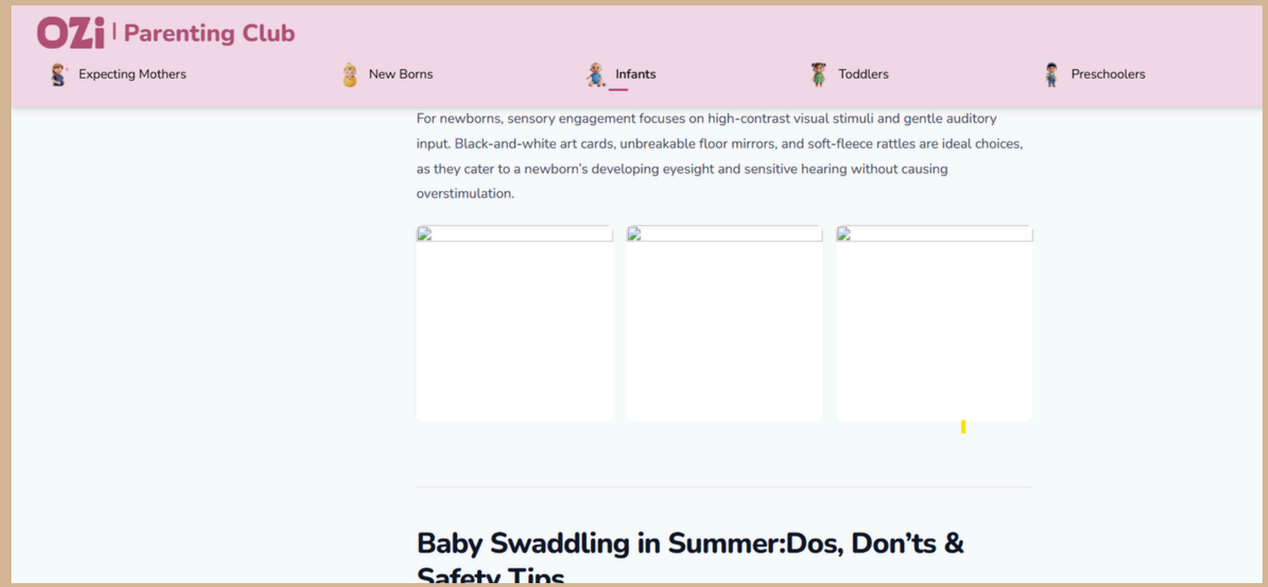

Recommendation:
- Add clickable social media icons to the footer.
- Prioritize Instagram for consumer-facing content and product discovery.
- Include LinkedIn for company updates and brand credibility.

Product Images Not Loading Correctly in Blogs

Current Issue:
Product images attached to some blog articles are not loading correctly, leaving blank white boxes where the product images should appear.

Example: https://ozi.in/blogs/infants/crib-vs-cot-difference

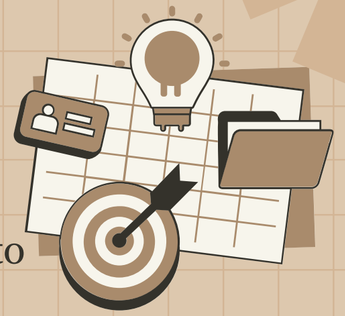

Recommendations:
- Check the product image URLs and confirm the images are loading correctly.
- Verify image paths, server responses, and lazy-loading behaviour.
- Ensure the correct product images are linked to the relevant blog content.
- Test image loading across desktop and mobile devices.

FINAL REFLECTION

Overall Assessment

OZI has opportunities to strengthen its e-commerce experience by improving technical SEO, making category and blog content more useful, and reducing friction in the customer journey.

Key Focus Areas

- Technical SEO: Improve URL consistency, resolve broken images, and validate structured data.
- Content & SEO: Build more useful category content, strengthen blog credibility, and improve internal linking.
- User Experience: Ensure product visuals load correctly, improve navigation, and make product information easier to understand.
- Conversion Optimization: Improve the visibility of key offers and trial options while simplifying the path to purchase.

Recommended Next Step

Prioritize issues that affect website functionality and product discovery first, then implement content and conversion improvements. Measure progress through organic traffic, engagement, product-page interactions, and conversion rate.
